

Assemblyman Will Barclay wants your input on the Mad River Wind Farm Project in the Town of Redfield, Oswego County.

- A utility-scale wind project generating 350 MW of power is being proposed.
- The project developer proposed up to 125 utility-scale wind turbines (preliminary estimates are for 88 utility-scale wind turbines).
- The proposed wind project is set to be built on the Tug Hill Plateau in the Towns of Redfield and Worth on a 200-acre footprint within approximately 20,000 acres of forest that is privately owned and actively managed for timber production.
- The majority of utility-scale turbines for the project would be located in the Town of Redfield.
- Turbine blade-to-tip height from ground: 591 feet.
- New power transmission lines will need to be constructed.
