Delivering for Southeast Queens

As we continue this legislative session in Albany, I remain committed to expanding opportunity, investing in education, and ensuring our communities in Southeast Queens have access to resources needed to succeed. From advancing financial literacy programs to opening new pathways in aviation careers for our young people, my office is focused on building a stronger future for our district.

Aviation Opportunities for Southeast Queens

Queens will continue to be a moving force for the world of aviation as it houses two great airports that serve well over 200,000 passengers daily. With these stellar airports, Queens' long aviation history is a legacy we should continue to maintain in Southeast Queens. I have partnered with United Youth Aviators to provide a Free Flight Training Program for high school students. In February we began flight training with eleven local students. As a pilot myself and now the Chair of the Legislative Aviation Caucus, creating pathways for students to pursue aviation careers will continue to strengthen the future of New York. Follow us for more updates on their progress.

Expanding Financial Literacy Education

Financial Education is one of the most powerful tools we can give and understand as a community. My office is championing "700 to 700" a financial literacy initiative which will help people throughout the state to understand credit, savings, and wealth building strategies. Through partnerships with the community, educators and financial experts, we are working to ensure students and families have the knowledge to build financial stability. As the Chair of the Banks Committee, it is imperative that I continue to advocate for financial literacy to be a pillar of change for our community.
